

Persicaria thought to be native to south-west Australia

Persicaria decipiens

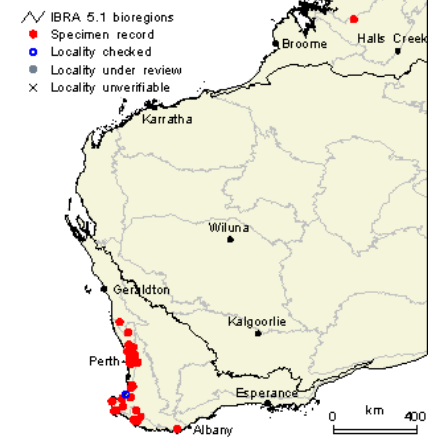

Slender Knotweed

Persicaria decipiens is a sprawling annual herb native to south-west Australia, the Kimberly, eastern Australia, New Zealand, Europe, Africa and Malesia. It is the most common Persicaria in south-west Australia occurring in swamps, lakes and rivers of the region.

Known distribution in Western Australia

Persicaria decipiens

Acknowledgements

Compiled by Kate Brown and Grazyna Paczkowska, Urban Nature, CALM

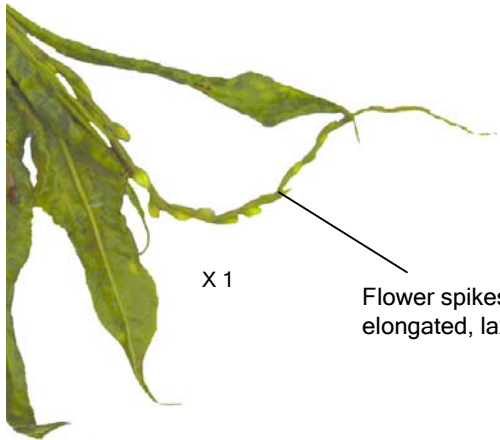

Mapping: by Paul Gioia. Image used with the permission of the Western Australian Herbarium, CALM (<http://florabase.calm.wa.gov.au/help/copyright>). Accessed on Tuesday, 14 March 2006.

Map by Paul Gioia, WA Herbarium. Current at December 08, 2005

Persicaria thought to be native to south-west Australia

Persicaria hydropiper

Water Pepper

Flower spikes greenish-white elongated, lax and slender

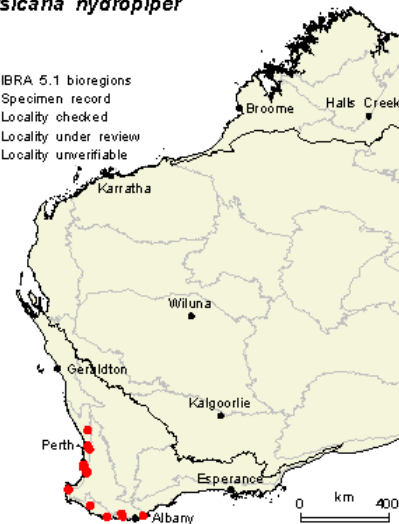

Persicaria hydropiper is an erect annual herb to 1m. It also is considered native to Queensland, NSW and Victoria and is widespread in the northern hemisphere.

Known distribution in Western Australia

Persicaria hydropiper

- IBRA 5.1 bioregions
- Specimen record
- Locality checked
- Locality under review
- Locality unverifiable

Map by Paul Gioia, WA Herbarium. Current at December 08, 2000

Acknowledgements

Compiled by Kate Brown and Grazyna Paczkowska, Urban Nature, CALM

Illustration: Botanic Gardens Trust (2006) in PlantNET - The Plant Information Network System of Botanic Gardens Trust, Sydney, Australia, <http://plantnet.rbgsyd.nsw.gov.au>

Mapping: by Paul Gioia. Image used with the permission of the Western Australian Herbarium, CALM (<http://florabase.calm.wa.gov.au/help/copyright>). Accessed on Tuesday, 14 March 2006.

Persicaria thought to be native to south-west Australia

Persicaria prostrata

Creeping Knotweed

1 cm

2 cm

1988	DUPLICATES
3/07/88	DISTRIBUTED
CANB

Identification label - W.A. Herbarium (PERTH)
Persicaria prostrata (R. Br.) Sojak
 Signd: B.J. Lepschi 9 Dec. 1995

WESTERN AUSTRALIAN HERBARIUM
 PERTH, WA.

WILDLIFE RESEARCH CENTRE

Name: Polygonum prostratum
 Habit: Prostr. shrub
 Height: 5m x 60cm
 Flower Colour: greenish
 Abundance: common
 Associated Veg: clay pan
 Topography: herb field
 Soil - surface: mud
 -subsurface: clay
 Locality: Timara Rd, Gingin to Mueha
 Collector: G.J. Keigher No. 9857
 DATE: 17/11/1987 lat. long.

Persicaria prostrata is a sprawling perennial herb with hairy stems and short, dense greenish flower spikes. It is common in wetlands from Gingin around to Esperance and is thought to occur naturally in all Australian states and in New Zealand.

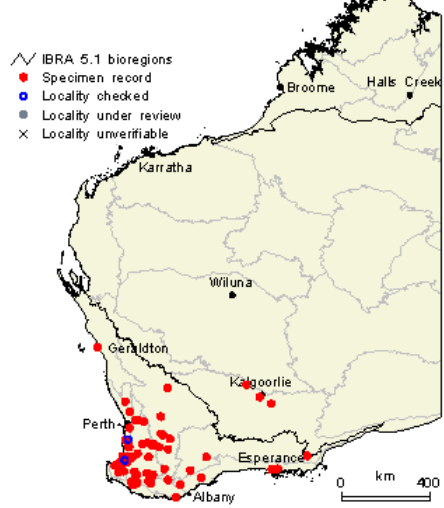

Acknowledgements

Compiled by Kate Brown and Grazyna Paczkowska, Urban Nature, CALM

Mapping: by Paul Gioia. Image used with the permission of the Western Australian Herbarium, CALM (<http://florabase.calm.wa.gov.au/help/copyright>). Accessed on Tuesday, 14 March 2006.

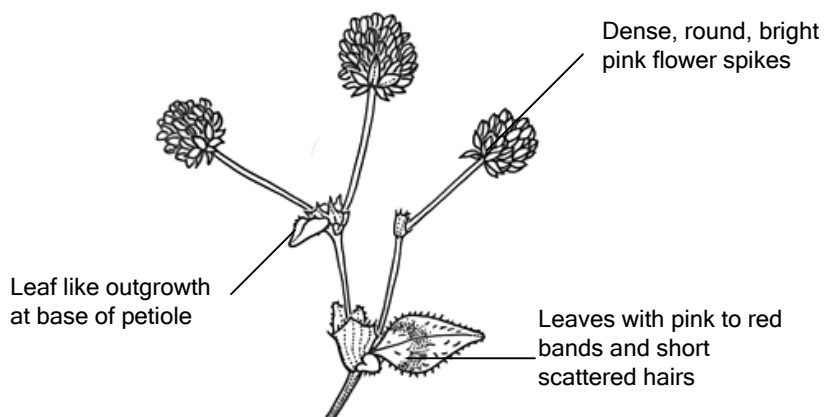

Known distribution in Western Australia

Persicaria prostrata

Persicaria thought to be introduced to south-west Australia*

*Persicaria capitata

Persicaria capitata, a prostrate herb, is a garden plant occasionally found naturalised in south-west Australia. Native of Asia

Known distribution in Western Australia

Persicaria capitata

Acknowledgements

Compiled by Kate Brown and Grazyna Paczkowska, Urban Nature, CALM

Photo: Flora of Zimbabwe.
www.zimbabweflora.co.zw/ - 7k - 11 Mar 2006

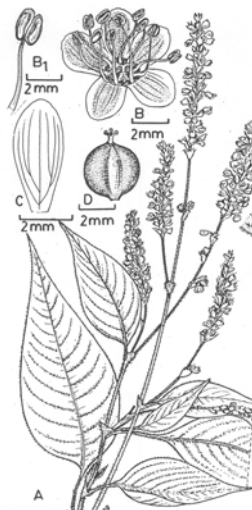

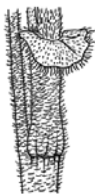

Illustration: Botanic Gardens Trust (2006) in PlantNET - The Plant Information Network System of Botanic Gardens Trust, Sydney, Australia, <http://plantnet.rbgsyd.nsw.gov.au>

Mapping: by Paul Gioia. Image used with the permission of the Western Australian Herbarium, CALM (<http://florabase.calm.wa.gov.au/help/copyright>). Accessed on Tuesday, 14 March 2006.

Persicaria thought to be introduced to south-west Australia*

*Persicaria orientalis

Princes Feathers

Persicaria orientalis is a large hairy annual herb to 2m with deep pink to red dense flower spikes and broad leaves. Only known to be naturalised from two locations in south-west Australia. Native to Asia.

Known distribution in Western Australia

Persicaria orientalis

Acknowledgements

Compiled by Kate Brown and Grazyna Paczkowska, Urban Nature, CALM

Photo: www.5e.biglobe.ne.jp/~lycoris/persicaria.orien

Illustration: Botanic Gardens Trust (2006) in PlantNET - The Plant Information Network System of Botanic Gardens Trust, Sydney, Australia, <http://plantnet.rbgsyd.nsw.gov.au>

Illustration: Flora of Pakistan; http://www.efloras.org/flora_page.aspx?flora_id=5

Mapping: by Paul Gioia. Image used with the permission of the Western Australian Herbarium, CALM (<http://florabase.calm.wa.gov.au/help/copyright>). Accessed on Tuesday, 14 March 2006.

Persicaria thought to be introduced to south-west Australia*

*Persicaria maculosa

Redshank, Jesus Plant

Dense, spike-like flower head (7-10mm wide)

Persicaria maculosa, an annual herb to 60 cm is only known to be naturalised from a few locations in south-west Australia. It is also naturalised in NSW, Victoria and Tasmania. It is native to Europe.

Acknowledgements

Compiled by Kate Brown and Grazyna Paczkowska, Urban Nature, CALM

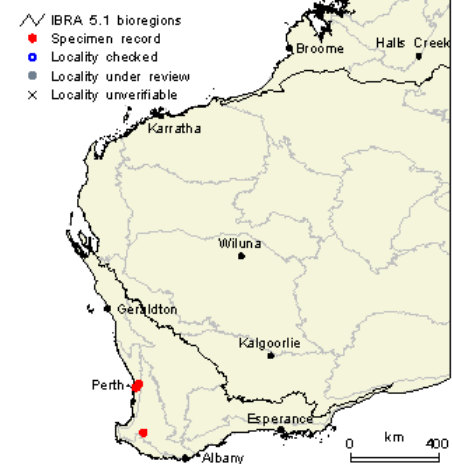

Illustration: Botanic Gardens Trust (2006) in PlantNET - The Plant Information Network System of Botanic Gardens Trust, Sydney, Australia, <http://plantnet.rbgsyd.nsw.gov.au>

Photo: www.biopix.dk/Temp/JCS_Persicaria%20maculosa%

Mapping by Paul Gioia. Image used with the permission of the Western Australian Herbarium, CALM (<http://florabase.calm.wa.gov.au/help/copyright>). Accessed on Tuesday, 14 March 2006.

Known distribution in Western Australia

Persicaria maculosa

Persicaria thought to be introduced to south-west Australia*

*Persicaria lapathifolia

Pale Knotweed

Persicaria lapathifolia an erect ascending plant 50-180cm tall. It is thought to be native to eastern Australia, Eurasia and Africa. Considered introduced in Western Australia, in south-west of the state it is only known from a few locations, all cultivated market gardens.

Acknowledgements

Compiled by Kate Brown and Grazyna Paczkowska, Urban Nature, CALM

Illustration: Botanic Gardens Trust (2006) in PlantNET - The Plant Information Network System of Botanic Gardens Trust, Sydney, Australia, <http://plantnet.rbgsyd.nsw.gov.au>

Mapping by Paul Gioia. Image used with the permission of the Western Australian Herbarium, CALM (<http://florabase.calm.wa.gov.au/help/copyright>). Accessed on Tuesday, 14 March 2006.

Known distribution in Western Australia

Persicaria lapathifolia

